Human Rights

Respect of internationally recognized human rights is a matter of course for us.

With over 150 subsidiaries and associated companies, the Salzgitter Group is represented in almost every region of the world. The production of goods and the exchange of goods and services both throughout the Group and with suppliers and customers are an essential part of our economic activities.

The principles of conduct enshrined in the Salzgitter Group's Code of Conduct are at the core of our corporate culture and at the same time represent binding guidelines for the actions of all Group employees. The respect of internationally recognized human rights is an essential component of these rules. Consequently, in the past, our Group companies have already aligned themselves with the National Action Plan "Business and Human Rights" (NAP) of the Federal Republic of Germany with regard to corporate diligence in respecting human rights.

Our goal is to also strengthen and solidify this understanding with all of our suppliers and in this way work towards the respect of human rights along the entire supply chain.

Identification - Prevention - Remedy

In order to achieve this goal, it is essential to learn about the risks associated with the respect of human rights in connection with our economic activities. Our employees are provided with the necessary knowledge through e-learning and classroom training to better identify human rights and environmental risks¹ in the supply chains. All operating Group companies report once a year on the human rights situation in their own business areas and on any risks concerning the respect for human rights at their suppliers that have become known.

All direct suppliers are screened for human rights and environmental risks by way of uniform Group-wide risk indicators. This risk analysis is conducted at least once a year and also on an ad hoc basis, for example if there are indications of a significantly changed or expanded risk situation, for example as a result of current market information or prompted by reports to our whistleblower system.

Our "FAIR TOGETHER" whistleblower system offers all Group employees, business partners and anyone else impacted by the economic activities of the Salzgitter Group or its suppliers the opportunity to point out circumstances in connection with the economic activities of the Salzgitter Group or one of its suppliers as a result of which they themselves or other people, the environment, Salzgitter AG or one of its Group companies are harmed, unjustly disadvantaged or natural resources unlawfully harmed and impaired.

We encourage our direct suppliers' efforts to ensure the respect of human rights in their own companies and among their suppliers. To this end, we positively assess the willingness of our direct suppliers to commit to meeting our expectations in terms of lawful conduct and respect for human rights, as well as the recognition of our Supplier Code in our award decisions.

Any violations of human rights that have occurred or are imminent must be reported immediately to our compliance management. The Group company concerned shall take appropriate remedial action to prevent an infringement, to bring it to an end immediately or to minimize the extent of the infringement.

The effectiveness of the preventive and remedial measures taken and of the whistleblower system is reviewed by the respective management once a year and on an ad hoc basis, among other things by means of risk-based control measures. Our Corporate Audit department carries out additional random checks.

All results of ongoing and incident-related risk identification and assessment, the preventive measures implemented, and the concepts, progress and results of any remedial action to be taken are documented by the Group companies and reported to our compliance management. In the same manner as the results of the Salzgitter Group's risk analysis, they are incorporated in condensed form into the Salzgitter AG Supply Chain Report.

Risks and expectations

In 2022, we subjected all operating Group companies and all active suppliers to a review with regard to human rights and environmental risks. In this context, we have already oriented ourselves to risks for legal positions within the meaning of the German Act on Corporate Due Diligence Obligations for the Prevention of Human Rights Violations in Supply Chains (Lieferkettensorgfaltspflichtengesetz).

Country risks and product group risks were used as risk indicators for this audit. In addition, current market information was included in the risk identification. The data obtained was processed by way of analysis software. In addition, all operating Group companies and defined suppliers took part in an assessment designed to identify human rights and environmental risks in the business units of our Group companies and the suppliers included, as well as in their respective supply chains.

Based on the results of our risk review, we did not identify any specific infringements or violations of human rights-related or environmental obligations either in the business units of our Group companies or at our suppliers.

Our risk assessment has shown that human rights or environmental risks are primarily to be expected along our supply chains that extend to suppliers in regions with higher country risks and/or higher product group risks, as well as in particularly complex supply chains whose participants are often unknown to us.

In addition to our Code of Conduct, our Group Guidelines set out in concrete terms the Executive Board's expectations of the behavior of all Group employees. All members of the Executive Board, managing directors and Group employees are expected to ensure that all human rights-related and environmental obligations are observed within the scope of their respective duties and responsibilities. Our Code of Conduct and our Group Guidelines apply uniformly to all locations of our Group companies worldwide and thereby also ensure uniform respect of human rights throughout the Salzgitter Group.

In order to further reduce human rights and environmental risks in our supply chains independently of the results of a risk analysis, we aim in future to work only with suppliers who recognize our Supplier Code of Conduct or enter into a comparable contractual arrangement with our Group companies, thereby committing themselves, among other things, to address our expectations regarding respect for human rights also with regard to their own suppliers and consequently along the entire supply chain.

Salzgitter AG and its Group companies expect all their suppliers throughout the supply chains to adhere to and observe the principles of the United Nations International Labor Organization (ILO), to comply with the prohibitions under the Minamata Convention, the Stockholm Convention (POP's Convention) and the Basel Convention, and to adhere to and observe the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in order to make a joint contribution to a humane working environment and a sustainable economy in harmony with natural resources. The expectations of Salzgitter AG and its Group companies with regard to suppliers in the supply chain are specified in concrete terms in the Salzgitter Group Supplier Code of Conduct.
